Apply by January 15, 2025

Manoogian Postdoctoral Fellowship in Armenian Studies

While in residence, the fellow will be affiliated with a department relevant to their research; they will be expected to participate regularly in CAS events, present one public lecture, and teach one undergraduate course. They will also organize a workshop in their field. Fellows are required to spend the academic year (September – August) in residence at the University of Michigan.

Manoogian Postdoctoral Fellowship in Armenian History

While in residence, the fellow will be affiliated with the Department of History; they will be expected to participate regularly in History and CAS events, present one public lecture, and teach one undergraduate course. They will also organize a workshop in their field. Fellows are required to spend the academic year (September – August) in residence at the University of Michigan. A successful applicant's work should speak to the global, interdisciplinary, and multidimensional vision of U-M History and contribute to broader thematic and topical discussions that are at the heart of the Department of History's mission, including but not exclusive to materiality, spatiality, environmental history, gender & sexuality, childhood studies, human rights, genocide studies, diaspora studies, nation & nationalism, global history, and Mediterranean studies.

► Eligibility

- PhD required. Postdoctoral Fellows may not pursue another degree while in this appointment, nor may they hold any other fellowships, tenure-track, or visiting positions concurrently. Applicants must have successfully defended their dissertation before the start of their potential tenure as Manoogian Fellows.
- Research and proposed courses should be related to Armenian Studies (literature, culture, visual arts, and politics). We reserve the possibility to ask the fellow to teach a core course already listed in our curriculum.

► Benefits

For the 2025-26 academic year, the fellowship will carry a stipend of around $52,000 and a $2,000 research/travel fund. Fellows will be eligible for U-M's high-quality benefits package.
