Life in Ann Arbor mixes Midwest American culture with a dynamic urban feeling, offering cultural activities like music, theater, and art. Highlights include Kerrytown's Farmers Market and the famous 'The Ark' music venue.

U-M is also well-known for its sports: Michigan athletic teams have won over 50 national championships in 12 sports over the years. The Michigan Stadium, or 'the Big House,' is the largest stadium in the U.S and over 100,000 fans come to each game! It's impossible to miss football Saturdays as you will see the streets filled with students wearing maize and blue to cheer for the Wolverines.

The university supports a diverse community with over 1,600 student organizations for you to join and make friends and work together.

Housing

Ann Arbor has a variety of housing options, including on-campus residence halls, co-operative housing, or off-campus apartments. Students are responsible for their own housing and should plan on making housing arrangements before they arrive. Students who want on-campus housing should apply for accommodation as soon as they are accepted. We recommend incoming exchange students apply for on-campus housing at U-M if possible, but it's important to explore off-campus housing alternatives and research backup options in case on-campus housing is not available. Visit housing.umich.edu or offcampushousing.umich.edu for more information.

The Global Scholars Program (lsa.umich.edu/globalscholars), a living-learning community in North Quad, can be a great option for students looking for housing on the central campus. To apply for the Global Scholars Program, students must wait to be accepted into University of Michigan and receive a valid U-M email address.
