The Immigrant Experience: Armenians, Arabs and Jews in America

Vahe Sahakyan • sahaky@umich.edu • Mon/Wed • 10:00-11:30AM

This course looks at the immigration, integration and naturalization processes of Armenians, Arabs and Jews in America from the late nineteenth century to the mid-twentieth century. It particularly explores the ways in which these immigrant groups and their descendants became Americans, while at the same time, retained some collective distinctive features as ethno-religious groups, developed loyalties to places of their origin and to their real or imaginary homelands in the Middle East.

NEAREAST 291.003

Fall 2016

Department of Near Eastern Studies

