

CG-2 Fashion, Social, and Environmental Justice

Partner: Fashioning for Social Environmental Justice

Mission:

Nonprofit focused on environmental and social justice
 Uses fashion to promote sustainability and peace
 Supports communities through education and collaboration

Why this matters

Fashion is one of the most polluting industries, and this work shows how design, research, and awareness can drive more sustainable and ethical practices

3. Peace Flag Partner Site Identification

Identified global partner communities
 Proposed locations including Medellín, Nairobi, Dhaka, San Salvador, and Manila
 Supported expansion of Peace Flag initiative
 Identified potential partners and events

Each piece uses sustainable materials such as cork and low-impact techniques while reflecting environmental data like coral reef health. The designs connect fashion to science, sustainability, and global responsibility through reduce, reuse, and recycle.

2. Annotated Bibliography on Policy/Regulation

We researched global policies on fashion waste, sustainability, and regulation across the U.S., EU, India, and France. We found growing efforts to hold companies accountable through waste management, sustainability standards, and limits on greenwashing. However, regulations remain inconsistent, revealing gaps in enforcement and global standards.

Analysis: Most students did not know where their clothes come from, but many recognized that fast fashion has a negative environmental impact.

Future Directions:

Expand partnerships with global communities to scale sustainable fashion initiatives. Increase student engagement through workshops and campaigns on ethical consumption. Continue researching policy solutions and support organizations working to reduce fast fashion's environmental impact.
