

Mummy portrait of a woman wearing jewelry

Egypt, Roman Period (98–117 CE), KM 26801

Mummy portraits like this one became popular in Egypt during the Roman period. While people were still practicing mummification, they adapted the Roman style of portraiture as a replacement for the more traditional Egyptian mummy masks. This is one example of how Roman and Egyptian identities melded during this period.