

Big Ten Academic Alliance Traveling Scholar Program for Graduate Students

The University of Michigan is a member of the Big Ten Academic Alliance, which includes all the schools listed here, and is the preeminent consortium for effective collaboration among research universities in the U.S.

Through our membership in the Big 10 Academic Alliance, graduate students in the member schools including the University of Michigan may participate in the Traveling Scholar Program, and may spend up to a full academic year visiting other members schools, pursuing specialized courses of study, or working in laboratories and facilities at other Big Ten Academic Alliance universities —with no change in registration procedures or additional tuition. The University of Chicago also participates in the Traveling Scholar Program.